

Local Dive Centre wins National Conservation Award

Local dive centre The Divezone based in Melksham have won a national conservation award. The 2008 coastal challenge award from The Marine Conservation Society was awarded to The Divezone in recognition of their work in raising funds for the MCS.

The Divezone have completed many beach clean ups and held a 24hr dive where they raised £4000, along with a constant promotion of the marine environment which is reflected in their shop and teaching of new divers. The Divezone's large dive club and staff take an active role in promoting and working on the projects that The Divezone partake in.

The award was presented to manager Colin Eadie at a gala evening in Birmingham, to celebrate 25 years of the MCS. The gala had around 50 guests who had worked with the MCS. They included naturalist David Bellamy along with current TV diving personalities Monty Halls and Mike DeGruy from the recent Pacific Abyss series on BBC1.
